2. INTRODUCTION

The Promotion of Access to Information Act, 2000 (referred to as "PAIA"), became effective on 9 March 2001. PAIA's primary objective is to uphold the Constitutional right to access any information held by the State or other entities. This access is necessary for the safeguarding or exercise of various rights. Both individuals and legal entities are granted the privilege of accessing records held by public or private entities. However, this right is subject to specific limitations aimed at facilitating the exercise and protection of these rights.

In cases where a request for information is made to a private entity under the provisions of PAIA, the private entity is required to disclose the requested information if the requester can demonstrate that the information is needed to protect or exercise certain rights. This disclosure is permitted as long as none of the refusal grounds outlined in PAIA are applicable. The legislation further outlines the procedures and processes related to information requests.

Under Section 51 of PAIA, private entities are mandated to create a manual that outlines how individuals can access information held by that entity. This manual must meet certain minimum requirements as specified in the legislation.

This document serves as RecruitMyMom's PAIA manual. It has been formulated in compliance with Section 51 of PAIA, as amended by the Protection of Personal Information Act, 2013 (referred to as "POPIA"). POPIA is designed to uphold every individual's Constitutional right to privacy. It emphasises the protection of personal information handled by both public and private entities. This involves establishing specific conditions that set the baseline for the handling of personal information.

POPIA introduces changes to certain provisions of PAIA, striking a balance between ensuring access to information and safeguarding personal data. This balance is achieved through the creation of an Information Regulator, tasked with exercising specific powers and duties outlined in both POPIA and PAIA. Additionally, POPIA introduces mechanisms such as codes of conduct and grants rights to individuals concerning unsolicited electronic communications and automated decision-making. These mechanisms work together to regulate the flow of personal information and address related matters.

In addition to its primary focus, this PAIA manual also covers information regarding the submission of objections to the processing of personal information and requests for the deletion or destruction of personal information or associated records, all in accordance with the stipulations of POPIA.

3. PURPOSE OF THE PAIA MANUAL

This PAIA Manual is useful for the public to-

- 3.1. check the categories of records held by a body which are available without a person having to submit a formal PAIA request;
- 3.2. have a sufficient understanding of how to make a request for access to a record of the body, by providing a description of the subjects on which the body holds records and the categories of records held on each subject;
- 3.3. know the description of the records of the body which are available in accordance with any other legislation;
- 3.4. access all the relevant contact details of the Information Officer and Deputy Information Officer who will assist the public with the records they intend to access;
- 3.5. know the description of the guide on how to use PAIA, as updated by the Regulator and how to obtain access to it;

- 3.6. know if the body will process personal information, the purpose of processing of personal information and the description of the categories of data subjects and of the information or categories of information relating thereto;
- 3.7. know the description of the categories of data subjects and of the information or categories of information relating thereto;
- 3.8. know the recipients or categories of recipients to whom the personal information may be supplied;
- 3.9. know if the body has planned to transfer or process personal information outside the Republic of South Africa and the recipients or categories of recipients to whom the personal information may be supplied; and
- 3.10. know whether the body has appropriate security measures to ensure the confidentiality, integrity and availability of the personal information which is to be processed.
